Search Engine Optimization

Page Titles

UpHours – opening hours of banks and shops in 32 European countries

Length: 67 character(s)

Title tag length: Although there are no strict rules on how long an SEO title should be, Google currently displays between 65 and 70 characters of the SEO title or meta title (including spaces) , so it is recommended to keep the length of SEO titles below 65 characters.

Quick note: meta titles are often called Page Titles.

Titlements have a direct impact on a page's CTR because this small detail is often the first impression of your link and where the user will place their mouse when clicking.

This makes writing meta titles an important SEO step because it must satisfy all the requirements of search engines and, at the same time, be attractive to users.

This test is based on 70 characters

Meta Description

Opening hours and addresses of 586,770 shops, post offices and bank branches in 32 European countries. Check what is open now.

Length: 126 character(s)

Sometimes Google uses the meta description tag of a page to generate a snippet in search results if it believes it gives users a more accurate description than what can be taken directly from the page content. Typically, a meta description tag informs and engages users with a brief, relevant summary about the content of a particular page. It works as a presentation that convinces the user that this page is exactly what they are looking for. There is no set limit on the length of the meta description, but the snippet is truncated in Google Search results if necessary, usually to fit the width of the device.

Technically, meta descriptions can be any length. But Google will cut them off after about 160 characters on desktop and 120 characters on mobile.

Remember that the content in your description tag is really a suggestion to Google. Google will display content in the snippet that it thinks is relevant and useful to the user's search intent, based on their query. Sometimes that translates into your meta description, sometimes into some of the content on your page. How do I use meta descriptions for SEO?

Meta descriptions don't directly impact a page's ranking in search results, but they can still have a big effect on SEO. Google actually relies on descriptions to determine the relevance of a page to a query. However, the biggest role they play is to encourage the user to click .

This test is based on 600 characters

Meta Keywords No Keywords

Keywords are the main words for which we want to appear on the search results page. These words reflect the needs and interests of users, so any digital project must take advantage of them to position its content compared to the competition, giving the user the best response to their query. Simply put, they help Google understand what the content of a URL is about, thus facilitating its indexing and displaying that information when users make queries related to it.

From Google search center it says:

Does Google use the meta keywords tag to position web search results?

No. Google sells the Google Search Appliance, and this product can match meta tags, including the meta keywords tag. However, it is a search engine for companies completely independent of our main web search engine. Our web search engine (the one that hundreds of millions of people use every day from Google.com) completely ignores meta keyword tags. Currently, these meta tags do not affect search results ranking in any way.

Why doesn't Google use the meta keywords tag?

About ten years ago, search engines evaluated pages only by their content and did not take into account external factors, such as the links that direct to them. At that time, keyword meta tags quickly became a place where many keywords (often unrelated to the content) could be included without regular visitors seeing them. As the meta keywords tag was constantly abused, Google decided a few years ago to ignore the meta keywords tag. For more information, look for life in the sordid world of SEO...

This tool is completely free, do not think that by showing Google Adsense ads I am becoming a millionaire, on the contrary it is totally false, most of it goes to them, :)

This is an example of what your Title Tag and Meta Description will look like in Google search results.

While Title Tags & Meta Descriptions are used to build the search result listings, the search engines may create their own if they are missing, not well written, or not relevant to the content on the page.

Title Tags and Meta Descriptions are cut short if they are too long, so it's important to stay within the suggested character limits.

Although there is no exact limit to the number of links you should include on a page, it is best practice to avoid exceeding 200 links.

Links pass value from one page to another, but the amount of value that can be passed is divided among all the links on a page. This means that adding unnecessary links will dilute the potential value attributed to your other links.

The use of the attribute Nofollow prevents the value from being passed to the linking page, but it's worth noting that these links are still taken into account when calculating the value passed through each link, so Nofollow links can also affect SEO.

Broken Links

No broken links were found on this web page

Broken links send users to non-existing web pages. They are bad for your site's usability, reputation and SEO. If you find broken links in the future, take the time to replace or remove each one.
